How to make increases and decreases on a loom?

In this tutorial, we offer you two Miyuki loom bracelet patterns. The first one is expert level and dates from 2016. We presented it to you in a video. In this video, you will see a method to make increases and decreases on loom. It is a meticulous technique that requires you to be able to slacken the yarn as you weave. Not all looms allow this. Make sure you have a loom where you can turn the wooden logs where the threads are hung.

The second version is dated September 14, 2022. It is a little simpler, because there are only a few cuts to be made. You will still need a loom on which you can tighten and loosen the thread. This last pattern was made with the Miyuki delica Eucalyptusbead set and golden miyuki beads DB-1832. This is the first model slightly modified.

For the first model, you will need 10mm weaving tips and for the second model, 13mm.

Make the weave starting with the center of the bracelet. Make one half of the bracelet, then the other half. As you decrease, you can move the wires up a notch. For example, once you have woven the middle of the center diamond, you can take the two threads on the sides and slide them with your fingernail over the next two threads. This will make it easier to make the decreases. Check out our REEL video on Instagram to see the gesture.

★ Step 2/3

Cut the yarns keeping as much length as possible. Knot the thread after the thread grouping on this thread grouping 3 times. Do this on both sides of the bracelet. Tie the wires alone 2 by 2 with triple knots. Trim the wire ends to 1 or 2 mm from the knot. Put a generous amount of glue on the knots and the last row of beads and remove the excess with a paper or toothpick. Slide the tip directly onto the last row of beads and fold the tab over.

★ Step 3/3

Secure the clasp with rings. Cut the extension chain to the desired size. You can cut the ring with the heart charm to remove it if you don't like it. Then attach your new charm with an open ring.
