How to make earrings with flower beads?

It's springtime! The sun is out, the birds are singing and flowers are blooming here and there, bringing a touch of color and freshness to our daily lives. It's the perfect season to renew your style, change your wardrobe and, of course, bring out your pastel and floral jewelry. After winter, it's always nice to reintroduce soft, light hues into our accessories, and what could be better than spring-inspired jewelry?

Here's a DIY flower earring made with flower beads and Miyuki Seed beads. Thanks to gold-plated copper wire, you can easily attach the beads to the ring. These discreet, poetic earrings are perfect for everyday wear, or to complement a guest outfit for a wedding or ceremony.

This tutorial is a variation on the wedding earrings you've come to love. If you've already made this project, you'll find that it's easy to personalize and adapt to your own style and desires. In fact, you can easily adapt this bead-attachment technique to different types of support, from creoles to stainless steel weaving rings. In this way, you can vary the pleasures and create earrings that perfectly match your tastes, while using different beads and materials.

This DIY is a great way to take a moment for yourself. Working with Miyuki beads, flower beads and gold-plated copper wire is simple and enjoyable, and the end result will be both pretty and personal. Take advantage of every step to let your creativity run wild and celebrate the arrival of spring with these flower earrings.
