How to make a gemstone necklace?

To make a gemstone necklace you can use nylon wire type thick fishing wire but it is better to use wire that will be more resistant to friction. Choose for this type of jewelry a wired wire corresponding to the weight and the size of the hole of the pearls. In this DIY jewelry tutorial the pierced Amazonite stones are very heavy and their hole is 1 mm. So we can take a thick wired wire. In this tutorial we took a 0.46mm wired wire so that it fits easily in the tips, but you can take a 0.6mm wired wire as well.

The collar needs little flexibility, a 7-core wired wire will be enough. As a reminder, the more strands in a wired wire, the more flexible it will be.

The tips used are sometimes a bit clogged. You can unclog them using a big needle or a small drill.

The assembly plate is a very useful tool when making necklaces and bracelets. You can easily visualize the rendering of your necklace and move the pearls until you like it. It also allows to have an idea of the length of the necklace while realizing a symmetrical necklace. This is a huge time saver because you will not have to undo your collar if it does not suit you.

Step 1:
Place the beads on the assembly tray. Cut 60 cm of wire and put a wire end on one end. Flatten it with flat pliers.

2nd step:
Thread the pearls. Place the second tip and with a pair of pliers take out the small end of the tip and pull it so that the tip is against the beads. Cut the excess wire and flatten the tip.

Step 3:
Attach the clasp T to the collar with two open rings.
